4. Page 3, line 1. Change to read:

"~~As of 20 June sporadic~~ Sporadic outbreaks still continued continue.
The Soviet authorities depended almost exclusively on the use of Soviet units troops in the areas of violent disorder, and did not withdraw begin withdrawing these troops until 24 June, when order was apparently restored."

5. Page 3, par 4b. Change to read:

"The occurrence of such extensive disorders, and the The decision to employ primarily Soviet troops to quell the disorders which the disorders they were handled, revealed Soviet distrust the inadequacy of the East German regimes police, armed forces, and security apparatus forces,
The decision to employ primarily Soviet forces troops in preference to East German forces to quell the disorders almost certainly reflected a desire to use the most reliable and efficient troops available. Soviet concern over the reliability of East German military units."

"On-the-other-hand ... Germany-for-free-elections."

8. Page 4, par 4f. Change to read:

"A workers' revolt against the authorities of a "workers state" is in itself a major propaganda defeat setback for the international Communist movement.

9. Page 5, par 5. Change to read:

"The Communist authorities in East Germany have announced that the concessions of 19 June 26 June will not only be carried through, but will be amplified. However, it is likely that only those measures which are consistent with the requirements of local economy and internal security will be implemented. It is unlikely, for example, that the Communists will be willing to follow through on their 10 June invitation to repatriate without prejudice those Germans who fled East Germany."

10. Page 5, par 6. Add following par after par 6:

...aspects of a "loyal opposition."

For the time being, the <sup>Kramer</sup> Soviets will place no great reliance on the KVP. <sup>Since the visit</sup> ~~Some~~ East German leaders <sup>have</sup> promised ~~that the KVP would be reduced and~~ that some funds allocated for the KVP would be diverted to finance programs to raise the standard of living of East Germany. There are no confirmed indications that these promises pertaining to the KVP reduction are thus far being carried out."

16. Page 8, par 10. Change to read:

"...between the US and its allies. Finally, ~~the Kremlin might be confident of its ability ultimately to subvert a neutralized Germany. The~~ uprisings in East Germany, however, very probably have increased the Kremlin's doubt that a neutralized Germany could be prevented from assuming a strong pro-Western orientation. Furthermore, the effect of adopting course of action 'b' would probably place the Soviet and satellite relations in such jeopardy that the Soviets may decide against adopting this course of action.
